

HOSPITAL TRUSTEES WILL MEET

FOUR MEN SELECTED TO HAVE CHARGE OF ERECTION OF PUTNAM COUNTY INSTITUTION WILL ORGANIZE AT SESSION CALLED FOR 10 O'CLOCK THURSDAY MORNING IN THE COURT HOUSE

The four men who have been named by the Putnam county commissioners to constitute the Putnam county Hospital Board of Trustees, will meet tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the commissioner's room in the court house to organize for their work.

William Kreigh of this city and David Hostetter of Roachdale are the Democratic members of the board, while Andrew Hanna of Greencastle and Jesse McCoy of Cloverdale are the Republican members. Ott Webb, county treasurer, by virtue of his office is treasurer of the board.

The four men chosen will determine the length of their term as trustee by lot. The terms of the four men named will be for one, two, three and four years respectively.

The county commissioners have fixed a tax rate of a half mill on each $100 for the hospital maintenance fund.

One of the first duties of the board of trustees will be the selection of a site for the hospital. Already several sites have been proposed. Dode Sweet has offered to give a tract of land just south of the city limits as a site.

A site on Northwood, the new addition to Greencastle, also has been proposed. One of the most favored locations which have been suggested is the Bascom O'Hair estate lot at the corner of Vine and Poplar streets. This lot is centrally located and would be easily accessible to the physicians and to visitors to the sick from any part of the county. Persons coming to Greencastle to visit people in the hospital would be in short walking distance from the hospital, no matter what way they would come to Greencastle. The location is in walking distance from any of the Railroad stations, near the interurban and close to the square.

The site question is one which the trustees will have to thrash out for themselves, however, and is one that requires much study.

ROBBERS HAUL AWAY SAFE FROM PARKER POSTOFFICE

WINCHESTER, Ind., Dec. 7.—Approximately $150 in stamps, a small sum of money and an iron safe were removed from the United States post-office and the American Railway express Company at Parker, eleven miles west of here, last night. Evidence showed the safe had been hauled away in a motor truck and that four persons had taken part in the robbery. The truck was headed toward Muncie, it was said.

DEBS GETS RECORD VOTE

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate for President in the last election, received nearly 950,000 votes—the greatest number polled by a Socialist presidential nominee in the country's history and approximately twice the Socialist vote in 1916.

Word received here today from Miss Angie Godwin who was injured Sunday in an accident at Leavenworth, Indiana is that she is recovering sufficiently to return to her home here on Thursday. However she will not be able to take up her duties again for several days.

SHORT VACATION FOR THE COUNTY SCHOOLS

The Putnam county schools have a short Christmas vacation period this year. The township schools will be dismissed on Friday, December 24 and will open again on Monday, January 3.

"HONEYMOON HIKERS" STOP HERE ON HIKE TO NEW YORK CITY

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Richards of Long Beach, California known as the Honey Moon Hikers because of their hike from Denver, Col. to Los Angeles, Cal., several years ago arrived in this city this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from Terre Haute en route to New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Richards left St. Louis on October 30 at 4 o'clock on a hike to New York City, a distance of 1,065 miles. The trip is being made on a wager of $2,000 by friends of Mr. and Mrs. Richards in Long Beach and they will have to reach New York City by New Year's Day. When they left St. Louis they had just $10 which was allowed as spending money and upon their arrival in Greencastle this afternoon they still had two dollars of it.

Mr. and Mrs. Richards are not allowed to ride on the steam roads or on boats this being prohibited in the wager, but they are allowed to accept automobile rides.

After a call at the Herald Office Mr. and Mrs. Richards left on their hike and expect to reach Indianapolis this afternoon.

DE PAUW STUDENTS BRING 1,000 DOLLARS PER MONTH TO GREENCASTLE POSTOFFICE

Postage alone amounts to a large item in the life of the DePauw student. The postage on student's mail going through the Greencastle Post-Office is worth $1,000 per month, according to local postal employees. This includes $375 on parcels, $400 on letters, and $225 on specials.

This means approximately 4,000 parcels, 20,000 letters, and 1,875 specials per month or about 135 parcels, 665 letters, and 60 specials pass through the Greencastle post office daily.

CORN STALK VALLEY

BEST OF ALL HOLIDAYS

Taking it all in all it may be safely asserted that Christmas is the merriest and the best of all holidays, and one which is likely to be observed for ages yet to come. Nations may rise and fall, new beliefs and religions may sweep away the old, but that would seem, indeed, a dreary and empty year which brought no merry Christmas in its annual round. May old Father Time long spare his holiday to mankind to gladden the hearts of all with its coming and may each Christmas be still merrier than the last.

HOOVER TO SEE HARDING FIRST

HUGHES, TAFT AND HARVEY FOLLOW ON LIST TO DISCUSS LEAGUE AT MARION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—President-elect Harding will inaugurate early next week the series of conferences with leading men of the country, not only of the Republican party, but of the Democratic party as well, from which is expected to evolve the policy of the new administration in international affairs and especially with regard to the League of Nations. The first of those with whom the President elect will confer at his home in Marion, Ohio will be Herbert Hoover. The ex-food administrator is expected to reach Marion Sunday. He will be followed by Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican candidate for president four years ago; ex-president Taft, one of the leading Republican exponents of a league of nations, and George Harvey.

THOMAS-MAXWELL ENGAGEMENT IS ANNOUNCED HERE

The engagement of Miss Marjorie Thomas of Rushville and W. Donald Maxwell of this city has been announced here to friends of the couple. The rear of the home of Zaring C. Duell which is near Manhattan was destroyed by fire early Monday morning. Mr. Duell who is employed at the Indiana Portland Cement Plant had made a fire in the kitchen stove and gone to the front part of the house. Hearing peculiar noises he returned to the kitchen and found the room in a mass of flames. The entire room and contents were burned before the fire could be extinguished.

Emmett Hurst, an employee at the Greencastle Gas Company office narrowly escaped death late Monday afternoon when he was overcome by gas fumes while assisting Manager H. E. Burkhalter in fixing a connection on a four inch main at the Gas plant in south Greencastle. The presence of two other employees at the plant and Mr. Burkhalter is all that saved Mr. Hurst from dying on the spot. Dr. Tucker was called to render medical aid and after being unconscious for more than an hour and a half Mr. Hurst finally regained consciousness and his condition continued to improve.

The funeral of Fred Hansel, an old soldier who died at his home 2 miles south of Putnamville Tuesday morning of Dropsy, was held this morning at 11 o'clock. Burial was in Forest Hill Cemetery. Mr. Hansel was 82 years old.

Section 4 of the Woman's Union of the Christian church will meet Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Lawrence Graham on South Jackson street.

Mrs. Lou Allen Baker who has been here for several weeks visiting relatives and friends left today for her home in California.

The funeral of Gerald Murphy, the 3 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Murphy who live near the Barnaby Mill was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial was in Forest Hill cemetery. The child's death occurred Sunday of pneumonia.

Ex-County Auditor and Mrs. Joe Allen left this morning for Phoenix, Arizona where they will spend the winter.

Brother Leo, in charge of the 1,000 acre farm at Notre Dame, and a farmer of great ability, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John McCabe at their farm near Morton. Brother Leo will be a guest at the farm for several days. Since he has taken charge of the Notre Dame University farm, the farm, which formerly was an ordinary one, has been brought up to the highest state of cultivation.

RECOMMENDS REVISION OF THE TAX LAWS

PRESIDENT WILSON IN MESSAGE TO CONGRESS, WHICH IS READ BY CLERKS, CONFINES HIMSELF TO DOMESTIC QUESTION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Both Houses of Congress were in brief session today to hear President Wilson's annual message. It was read by the clerk, Mr. Wilson having heeded the advice of his physician not to appear in person to present his recommendations.

Galleries in both Senate and House were crowded. Both those drawn by the chance that the President might appear in person and those attracted by the possibility that his message might touch upon the League of Nations question or his own approaching retirement to private life were disappointed.

Mr. Wilson confined himself almost wholly to domestic questions. Only by inference did his message refer to the nearing close of his administration and that was in the concluding paragraph. The proposals he presented, the President wrote, were not so much a series of recommendations as a confession "of faith in which I was bred and which it is my solemn purpose to stand by until my last fighting day."

Chief Recommendations. The President's chief recommendation follow:

Tax law revision with simplification of income and profits taxes. Philippine Independence.

A loan to Armenia. Economy in government appropriations and expenditures and creation of a "workable budget system."

Cold storage and other laws affecting the cost of living, and the Federal licensing of corporations. Rehabilitation and training of disabled soldiers and sailors.

The president did not indorse a bonus. He did not refer to the league or the peace treaty fight except perhaps by inference when he quoted Abraham Lincoln's "Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it."

The House listened to the reading of the President's message in silence until it was concluded, when the Democrats arose and applauded. There was some applause also from the galleries.

In the Senate arrival of the White House messenger with an armful of communications including some 17,000 recess and other appointments and with the announcement, "Several messages in writing from the President," caused laughter on the floor.

FOX RIDGE SCHOOL IS CLOSED BECAUSE OF DIPHTHERIA EPIDEMIC

The Fox Ridge school was closed Monday by County Health Officer Dr. C. T. Zaring following the deaths of William R. and Harold M. Kensworthy on Sunday of Diphtheria. This step was taken to prevent the spread of the disease. The little Kensworthy boys attended the Fox Ridge school.

BILL RHODES' PROFESSIONS

Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Company
By C. T. W.

"Well, if there ain't another one of 'em!" she exclaimed. And, rushing to the door, Mrs. Archer met the intruder with: "You needn't ask me for anything to eat. I've refused two of your kind this morning, so you needn't tell me any of your stories of sickness and weak backs."

"Ah, madam, I see you are laboring under a misapprehension."

Mr. William Rhodes assumed a pained expression as these words flowed smoothly from his lips. He knew very well that she had sent away empty-handed two of his companions. Therefore he had come.
"You blokes ain't onto yer job," he remarked to his friends after they had told their story. "Guess I'll mosey up there to dinner. I'll bring ye back some of de feast." And his friends were sure he would keep his word.
Bill always used the vernacular among his pals, but he could, and on certain occasions did, speak good English.

Bill Rhodes was of a well-to-do family, quick-witted, intelligent, and well-educated. At college he had not taken honors only because he had been born without energy. But with his quick and retentive mind it was impossible for him to stand far from the head of his class.

After graduation, his laziness and love for booze soon made him what we have seen him to be. His family had lost all track of him, for which Bill was lastly thankful. Among "the boys" he was an absolute ruler. "Wat Bills says goes!" was a motto strictly adhered to, because Bill never said work.

Mrs. Archer's face showed mingled confusion and doubt as she said:

"Then you are not a tramp? And you have not come for something to eat?"

At this Bill straightened up, assuming an injured air, and replied with his most insinuating tone:

"Madam, I'm not a tramp!"

Mrs. Archer caught the tone and noticed that he did not deny that he had come for food. She was about to question him further, when he half turned, saying:

"I am a professional man and have suffered misfortune. I will not deny that I was intending to ask for something to stay the pangs of hunger.
However, I infer that you have been annoyed by rascals who pose as unfortunates, so I will not trouble you.
Good morning, madam."

He started to leave, but Mrs. Archer had been deceived, as he had intended that she should be, by his language and by his polished manner. She was sorry she had been so hasty, and was now anxious to soothe the wounded man's pride.

"Come in," she said. "You say you are a professional man? What is your calling?"

"I have four professions, madam." Then, with an insinuating glance at the woodpile, "Can't I do something to compensate you for your trouble?"

"No, not come right in. I'll have something for you in a minute. Sit down here, please."

Not another word was spoken till the table fairly groaned under the load of dainties prepared for the birthday dinner. Then, as Bill moved to the table, Mrs. Archer asked him for the story of his misfortunes.

"It's a long story, madam," said he,
"and I have had nothing to eat since yesterday morning."

Being now sure of his dinner, he offered nothing more for the present, but gave his undivided attention to cold chicken, baked custard, and salt almonds, taking them in the order of easiest reach.

"It's a long story, madam," said he,
"and I'm glad you're here."

Another pause while he fished an olive from the bottle. After nibbling at it, he put his hand to his lap, and leaned back as if looking for something he missed.

Mrs. Archer sprang to her feet, exclaiming: "Oh, excuse me!" and brought a napkin. Bill leisurely wiped his lips, then continued his story between attacks on Mrs. Archer's culinary contributions.

"When I had finished my course at Harvard, I entered the office of one of the best law firms in Boston. I worked hard, and after sixteen months hung out my own shingle. I had always contended that an honest lawyer was not an impossibility, and that the idea that a lawyer could not be honest was absurd."

"I still think that it is possible for a strong man—morally strong, madam—to be an honest lawyer. But I know from experience that his temptations are legion. I was not strong enough for my undertaking, so, though I hated to give it up, I closed my office and studied for the ministry. That was the end of my first profession."

"Brave soul!" cried Mrs. Archer.
Bill ate in silence for a few minutes.
"As a clergyman I was successful from the very beginning. I was naturally gifted with a persuasive manner—glancing from his hostess to her viands—and my church prospered spiritually as well as materially. At the end of the first year it was necessary to erect a larger church edifice.
Of course, I do not claim that this was due entirely to my efforts, but I cannot truthfully say that I do not think I was at least partially responsible for it."

"Oh, I'm sure you were! Did this work agree with you?"

"In all save one particular. From childhood my throat had troubled me.
Public speaking irritated the vocal organs, and in eighteen months my voice was so nearly gone that I could not speak for more than ten minutes at a time. So with a heavy heart I said good-by to my second profession."

"What a pity!" sighed Mrs. Archer.
"It must have been hard to leave you people."

Here Bill cast his insinuating glance over the empty dishes. Mrs. Archer quickly brought him a huge piece of cake, a dish of strawberries and cream, and a glass of milk. As Bill slowly consumed these, he continued his narrative.

"Well, madam, it was hard. But not so hard as it had been good-by. I had determined to return to them, not as their pastor, but to minister to their physical disorders. In two years I did return to practise medicine among them. My dear people showed their confidence in me by giving me a practise which was the envy of all my confreres. To them I was still their beloved pastor, though I took their money for my prescriptions."

"But I was overworked, and on two or three occasions took stimulants to enable me to attend to my patient, when I should have been in bed myself. The last time I took too much and my mind became confused. I gave a deadly poison for a sleeping potion. After making this disastrous mistake I walked home, and the outdoor air cleared my weary brain.
Then I realized what I had done and my conscience accused me terribly. I could not face my shame. The first train carried me as far as I could pay my way."

Here Bill arose and picked up his hat, which he twirled nervously. "It was a hard fight," he said as if to himself.

"Yes, madam, it was a terrible fight, an awful struggle! But at last I gained the victory. I am now on the way back to give myself up. But I shall never again practise my third profession."

Bill stood with one hand on the doorknob, the other holding his hat, the very image of shame and despair.

"You poor man," cried Mrs. Archer.
"But you will be convicted. They couldn't do that. And you have another —you said you had four."

"Ah," said Bill, brightening, "that brings us down to the present, and to my fourth and last profession—a profession in which few are proficient, but which I have mastered. It was my mainstay in the practise of my other professions, and will be the means of my future support whether I be convicted or acquitted. Madam," he added, bowing low and preparing to make his exit, "I am a professional liar."

Mrs. Archer stood gazing at the man in amazement.
"You!" she gasped, but the man had closed the door behind him and was gone.

Ten minutes later, when Bill's companions were feasting on the pies which Mrs. Archer had placed just outside the kitchen door to cool, that lady was standing where Bill had left her, her gaze resting on the empty table.

GEMS FROM HISTORY.

"Why all this needless cruelty?" expostulated the advisers of Nero.
"There's the reason," said the general ruler. "I'll bet a thousand ses-terces to a brass obolus that I'm played up in more historical novels than all the rest of these emperors put together."

Subsequent events proved that the astute Eretellan was right.

They were getting ready to pour the moulten gold down Mr. Crassus's throat.

"What are you snivelling about, Crass?" said the barbarian chief, not unkindly.

"Nothing, nothing," sobbed the Roman Rockefeller, "but if mother should ever find out that I had to take the gold cure!"

"Where did you learn the art of war?" asked Darius as Alexander the Great made a bee-line for the Babylonian mint.

"At a correspondence school; it affects the pay envelope," replied the youngster, hurriedly rifling the royal treasury.

"And oh, Leander," said Hero, softly patting her lover's bathing suit,
"how do you feel when you are swimming at Hellespont?"

"Just kinda wet and tuckered out," replied Leander, thoughtfully.

This almost commonplace answer teaches us that even a celebrity has his off-days.

"You must learn," said the Persian instructor, "to speak the truth."

"But, please, sir," objected one of the studious lads, "how about military strategy and high finance?"

"Have no fear, my son, after you learn to speak the truth, we give you a special post-graduate course in when to speak it."

The sailors of the galley who had begun to murmur were more than matched by the wily Ulysses.

"Want to go home, do ye?" he roared.
"Why, ye miserable swab, don't know you're takin' a personal-conduct mid-winter Mediterranean cruise—health and education combined—all points of interest visited—in charge of all experienced traveler—pleasant congenial party—references given and required—no extras! Watcha growl-in' about?"

The oarsmen now cheered up perceptibly and at the next stop several were observed buying souvenir postal cards.

Fred Tucker, who about a year ago was sentenced to serve a term in the State Farm by Judge Hughes for taking an automobile belonging to his uncle, without permission, the sentence being suspended pending good behavior and a promise that he would go to work and keep working, was arrested today on an order of Judge Hughes and was sent to the penal farm to serve his sentence. Tucker failed to follow out the judge's instructions that he go to work and keep at work.

A SAFE TEST

For those who are in need of a remedy for kidney troubles and backache, it is a good plan to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They are strongly recommended by Greencastle people. Ask your neighbor.

Mrs. Claude Ash, 315 N. Indiana St., says: Several times during the past few years I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills for kidney trouble and have found them very satisfactory indeed. If my kidneys get out of order I have awful headaches and get terrible dizzy spells when I stoop over. I also have headaches. But now since I have known about Doan's Kidney Pills, I go right up to mullins Drug store and get a box of Doan's and they soon strengthen my kidneys and have me feeling all right. I am very glad to say anything about Doan's I can for they are fine.

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Ash had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Motor Truck Lowers Farm Costs

THE farmer of the Middle West is a business man who utilizes every labor or time-saving device to increase his profits. That's why the farmer is coming to be the heaviest buyer of motor trucks.

At seeding time he hauls his seed to the field, thus economizing hand labor; at harvest time he hauls his grain, potatoes, and other produce, to market, and distance being a less prohibitive factor, is able to secure better prices; and all through the year he hauls his live-stock and chickens to market, and is able to deliver them in better condition, and with a minimum of shrinkage.

These are a few reasons why the farmer finds the motor truck profitable.

It must be apparent, then, that in no other part of the nation is rural distribution of petroleum products quite so important as in the states served by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). These are the farming states which supply not only the Middle West but the entire nation with food. The ten states served by this Company are well termed the bread-basket of the nation.

To be of economic service to the farmer, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) maintains throughout the territory it serves a complete chain of bulk stations, with tank wagons for delivery throughout the rural districts. The farmer has come to know that he can depend upon this service even under most trying conditions. That busy, dark green tank wagon serves the farmer with all the faithfulness with which the milk wagon and the ice wagon serve the flat dweller in the city.

The comprehensive distribution system of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is geared to service at the lowest possible cost. The money thus saved through large scale operation is passed on to the consumer by reasonable tank wagon prices throughout the territory served.

That this complete and highly efficient system of distribution maintained by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is indispensable to the new type of business farmer, no one acquainted with the facts can doubt.

The Flirt

The girl, who was a very pretty girl, pointed an accusing finger at Freddy Blair and laughed.

"Freddy," she cried, "you'd be the most frightened mortal on earth if I should say 'yes'—if I should really promise to marry you."

Freddy looked offended at this. "I don't see why you say that, Emma," he replied. "Surely I've proposed to you enough times to show that I'm in earnest."

"That's just it," the girl rushed on. "That's the very reason you propose. You are mortally certain that I'll refuse you, and yet each time there is the pleasurable excitement of fearing that, after all, this may be the time that I accept. You are an old fraud," she laughed again.

"Huh!" said Freddy, "you're certainly long on the logic. But how are you going to explain the first time that I proposed? I didn't have all your refusals then to make me think you were going to turn me down."

"Oh, I can explain that all right," replied Emma, airily. "I noticed that you didn't propose until you heard me declare that I wasn't going to marry for a long time, and that I wouldn't accept any man until I was ready to marry."

"Freddy looked at the girl with a sudden gleam in his eyes. 'I believe that the period you named during which you would not get married was a year?'" he questioned alertly.

For some reason the girl blushed at this. "Maybe I did say a year," she replied hastily. Then she rushed on. "Don't you know, Freddy," she asked, "that if I wasn't so well acquainted with you, you might have made me believe that you were really in love with me, with your countless proposals. But, luckily, I know that you're a desperate flirt!"

"What!" cried Freddy. "You can't name another girl that I've proposed to as much as I have to you."

"Perhaps not," assented Emma, "but it's only because you haven't had the chance."

"Is that so?" answered Freddy, somewhat hotly. "Well, I'm going to propose to you just once more." He took out his watch and looked at it. It was just three minutes of 12. "Do you realize," he continued, "that the year during which you said you would not become engaged is now up? So if I didn't really want you—if I was really afraid that you would accept me—I wouldn't propose again. But here goes, for the last time. Emma, will you marry me?"

"No, you silly boy," the girl replied, sweetly.

Dark despair swept over Freddy. He hadn't really expected that answer. The one he had expected was "yes." Involuntarily he sighed. He snapped back the lid of his watch and prepared to go. The 12 o'clock church bells rang out. Before he had taken over two steps from her, Emma called to him softly.

"Freddy," she cried, "you were just a little premature. My year wasn't up until 12 o'clock, and as you say you won't propose again and as you're in earnest and I'm in love—Oh, Freddy, Freddy, dear, will you marry me?" Freddy's tumultuous answer was sufficient.

Irritating Sounds

"I don't see," said Chinnert, "how any one can be so immodest as to play the cornet right in an open window farce feet from a thoroughfare where pedestrians are passing up and down. And especially in warm weather when there are so many people sitting on porches and balconies and when everybody's windows are wide open."

"A man might just as well sit on his front porch or in his front yard playing the cornet as in an open window. It would be just as modest and retiring."

"But in regard to sounds you cannot turn away your ears. You simply have to hear. Then, why should a man be allowed to expose his music to the public ear, a thing that certainly should not be paraded and the exposure of which modesty forbids?"

"There is that infernal cornetist, Vubbs. The sounds which he turns loose are vile, but he doesn't care. Where he sits by the window, puffing and working away to produce those noises."

"He has a sheet of music before him and tries to make people think that the music sheet calls for the crude sounds that he emits. But he doesn't fool anybody. No such wretched sounds were ever indicated by black notes. There is nothing like them in the whole gamut of noises."

"Now, last night I finished my dinner early, so that I would have a chance to talk to that lovely little Mer-ringue girl. But hardly had I seated myself on the steps and prepared to look at her appropriately when the cornet fiend emitted a note of sickening derision, which turned my expression of dramatic intensity to one of sheep's eyes and dying califishness."

"The cornetist then gave vent to a succession of sounds that took all the romance out of life. The girl began to look silly to me instead of beautiful."

"That man must play his music backward. All the effects music is supposed to have he reverses."

"If music be the food of love, then that stuff of Vubbs' must be the poison of love. It couldn't pass a board of censors and should be forbidden, accordingly."

Making the Home Comfy

HOUSEHOLD BAGS.

USEFUL IN SMALL APARTMENTS
FOR KEEPING MANY THINGS
AT HAND.

The Kitchen Bag for Ironing Needfuls
Should Be Made of a Strong Quality of Ticking.

In the small apartment where space is at a premium, bags are almost as valuable as closet-room. A number of things that would be endlessly in the way scattered on the closet-floor may be kept conveniently at hand, yet quite out of the way, in bags on the closet door. Some of the most useful bags for apartment housekeeping are: The shoe bag, on the upper part of the closet door; the paper and string bag, on the lower half of the same door; the laundry bag, in the bathroom; the dustcloth bag, a gay silk affair, which may hang in the hall; the mending bag, the darned bag, various piece bags for remnants of light and dark fabrics, laces, buttons, and notions, all of which may hang near the sewing machine from small brass hooks screwed into the wall.

Kitchen bags should include the strong ticking bag for ironing needfuls—holders, wax, pressing cloths and the like; the laundry bag for soiled dish towels and table napkins (which should always be kept separate from the general family laundry bag in the bathroom) and a flat bag of light cloth, in which lamp cloths, polishing cloths and other cloths saturated with oil may be stored away.

Be a dreamer if you will, but get up and hustle when the alarm clock goes.
